When I was a kid, I can still remember my dad telling me the secret of getting people to like me. He said that in conversations, I needed to get the focus onto the other person. Just get them talking about themselves and what they love. He said one of his good friends was a master at this. Sure enough at the next social gathering, I found myself talking to this person and after about half of an hour, I realized I had been telling him all about my love of basketball. My dad had been right. Later I found out my dad was a student of Dale Carnegie. In my humble opinion every man woman and child should be required to read this book. Oh, if only the world tried to have relationships based off of these principles. What a happy place we would all live in. Many people would say they do not have the time or desire to sit down and read an old non-fiction book. I would definitely invite them to try the Instaread version at the very least. It is short and to the point. It does a great job of summarizing the main points of the book without all of the fluff. This one is a classic, ladies and gentlemen and a must read!
